State Repression Against Greenpeace Antinuclear French Activist Yannick Rousselet

Ouch ... the incredible Yannick Rousselet, the campaigner at Greenpeace against Nukes, Yannick Rousselet, whose ideas and actions of genius are no longer counted, is now a government target.

As everywhere, the state/establishment when under pressure resorts to authoritarianism and force. In France, Greenpeace anti-nuclear activist, Yannick Rousselet, has had his house raided in the early hours of the morning...with the police pulling up outside in their black vans and taking photos (including family photos), computers, USBs, files etc. on the basis that Yannick has been threatening state defence secrets.

It's what happens when your campaigns are successful enough to threaten the state

By Yannick Rousselet :

"A few days ago, I informed you that I had been the victim of an act of "malevolence". In fact, it was practiced by a state service, DGSI (Directorate General of Internal Security, the former DST).

Indeed, last Tuesday morning, these "good people" parked their black sedans in front of my home, donned their "police" armbands and came to search my family home.

They took all our digital media : phones, computers, internal and external hard drives, USB flash drives, SD cards. In this seizure, files related to our militant activities, but also all our photos and videos of families.

This is an investigation for “compromise of defense secrecy”, the initiative of which would come from the HFDS (Senior Defense and Security Official) and General Riach (National Nuclear Security Officer).

It is the Paris public prosecutor who is in charge of this investigation. They told me that I would be summoned for a police custody soon.”
